Patricia Lawson, USA

"After only four intensive courses at the Goethe-Institut I feel ready to study in Germany. It won't be easy but I believe that our teachers prepared us very well."

CAMPUS courses combine core lessons in a classroom setting (maximum class size: 18) with optional working groups and projects (up to 12 participants) where you can set your own priorities to build the skills you need. This concept lets you map out your own learning path to arrive at the goals you have set for yourself.

- highly varied full-day programme
- 25 units of instruction per week (Mon. – Fri.)
- individual learning in the media resource centre (Mon. – Sat.)
- intensive support and personal learning plans
- individual advice on university studies
- orientation support until you begin your studies
- cultural programme

In our courses you'll do more than just learn German:

- Learning activities are based on academic topics and issues.
- Course contents and methods are geared towards the information society.
- You'll practise everyday situations for student life in Germany.
- You'll get to know people from all over the world.
- Together we'll open doors to Germany and its culture.
